

Date: 1989-01-04

Author: John E. Fetzer

Category: JEF Memos and Articles

DRAFT OF MEMORANDUM

1/4/89

When I was a boy, I devoured the books of Tom Swift. This scientific fiction predicted an array of things that would happen sometime in the future. I used to speculate as a youngster whether or not I would ever see any of that happen. As a matter of fact, in my single lifetime I have not only seen it all happen, but far exceed the fondest expectations and prognostications of Tom Swift. When it comes to the field of energy medicine, I foresee the same kind of progress. To be sure, sweeping changes are slow in their inception because they represent a complete re-education and re-orientation of mental approach to so many problems that exist today. It will take time to make the transition from the present accepted methods in these later centuries and move into the electronic age of healing. Nevertheless, we should make a start. The healing art and Technique, particularly the innovations that will contribute to health in this new age, will be in the field of electronics. It will become the primary tool of a healing practitioner. Science will awaken to the electronic field as it applies to diagnosing the human aura. Research in this field under the sponsorship of science will lead to the introduction of diagnostic devices that will be used to diagnose the human aura by scanning it with a sensitive instrument somewhat similar in appearance to the remote control device used with our television sets. The sensitive equipment will absorb the currents within the human aura and register them on a graph, literally drawing a picture for the healer. A large screen will show the outline of the human form as the auric scanning proceeds, electronic sketches will appear upon the screen. Where weakness prevails or disease is presented in any portion of the anatomy, this harmony of any kind will be located on the screen sketch. This, then, is the new direction for the diagnostic procedure.

Proceeding from diagnosis to treatment, the new age physician will then turn to another newly projected piece of electronic equipment. The auric penetrating equipment will beam a force field of healing ray to that area in need of balance as indicated. Healing will take place in the physical form as the electronic beam is administered through the electromagnetic field of the body of the patient, the treatment being administered to the identical spot in the human auric field. A further electronic piece of equipment will be designed to "charge" the physical energy field, the magnetism and the metabolism of the body. This equipment will literally withdraw from the atmosphere the atomic energy particles and assimilate them in such a manner that they may be re-directed to the human form before it. This will represent a treatment in general well-being of a preventative nature.

It is my belief that new electronic fact finding and diagnostic equipment will be especially helpful for disorders of the brain. The mapping of the brain will be one of the foremost contributions to this form of science. Naturally, out of this, will also prevail an understanding and realization that as a man thinketh, so will his thoughts be reflected in physical manifestation. In time, physicians will take into consideration the entire being of the patient and all four of his lower bodies as parts of his united whole in every diagnosis and treatment. Actually, what I am saying is only paraphrasing the prognostications of science fiction direction to this age. The big question is, with this as a basis, where do we make the start. This is an attempt to focus the direction of the Foundation in its research program to that which I believe is fundamentally necessary for the long range planning and programming.

I thoroughly believe that there is an Edison or an Einstein hidden within every student of science waiting to be brought forth into manifestation. I believe the world has many, many young scientists who seek the inspired thought and the direction that comes from the voice of divinity within. Here lies the navigation of uncharted seas a revelation awaiting that one who dares to pit himself along with the great ones in the higher worlds who stand ready to cooperate in venues into the unknown.

Let science push back the horizon of their conceived possibilities and practice open mindedness toward spiritual infiltration of ideas born of spiritual wisdom. These young scientists are hidden in our laboratories everywhere. They serve humanity in an unknown place under the inspiration of a guiding hand. When a cleaning of the attitude of the scientific world takes place, these chosen ones will begin to bring forth these benefits and blessings which are due to come. Actually everything I have said is only a paraphrase of other voices. So be it.